PLESTINA VICTOR IN ROUGH HOUSE BOUT

Foul Tactics of Pesek Cause His Disqualification and Banishment.

TWO FALLS FOR WINNER

Disgraceful Work of Pole Angers Spectators and Police Save Him From Injury.

By CHARLES F. MATHISON.

Following one of the most disgraceful and brutal exhibitions ever furnished by a wrestler in this city, John Pesek of Nebraska was ruled out of the mat game for life at Madison Square Garden last night and Martin Plestina, victim of Pesek's brutality, was declared winner of their match on fouls.

Pesek showed conclusively from the time that he and Plestina took hold that he had no faith in his ability to win fairly and therefore had made up his mind to win by foul methods, using his head as a battering ram.

Pesek hammered Plestina's face till both eyes were closed and blood flowed from his nose and mouth. Pesek also used the strangle hold, poked his fingers in Plestina's eyes and also struck his opponent with closed fists. Twice during the contest Referee John Fleson disqualified Pesek for his foul tactics, once after 11:19 minutes of wrestling and again after 20 minutes and 4 seconds.

The Boxing Commission then decided that the men must continue wrestling to a fall if they wrestled all night. After seven minutes more of foul tactics by Pesek Referee Fleson once more went between the men and disqualified Pesek for the third time. This was followed by the commission putting the Nebraska out of the State.

Pesek Wanted to Withdraw.

Pesek's conduct during the day was very peculiar. He notified Tex Rickard that he had a lame arm, but an examination by the commission's doctor failed to show any injury. The manner in which he used both arms on Plestina proved conclusively that they were in normal condition. Rickard intimated at the close of the bout that Pesek's actions were part of a scheme to discredit wrestling under the auspices of the Madison Sporting Club. Pesek's share of the receipts was withheld and he will probably not receive any compensation.

Rickard said that in spite of the bad impression created by Pesek's conduct he will stage all the wrestling matches planned by him and there will not be a recurrence of the scenes enacted in the ring last night.

J. C. Marsh, manager of Plestina, was yesterday suspended by the Boxing Commission pending investigation of his record.

Owing to Pesek's action it was impossible to get a line on Plestina as a wrestler and this will not be known until he is pitted against a fair opponent. Plestina was the first to enter the ring. He weighed 230½ pounds and seemed to be in magnificent condition. He went slow in leaving his dressing room, but he soon appeared, thus disproving the report that he had an injured arm. The conditions of the match called for two out of three falls, with the provision that if one was recorded at the end of two hours that fall would decide the match. In the event of there being no fall at the end of two hours the contest would proceed for another hour, and if there still was no fall the bout would be called a draw.

Pesek began the contest in a very rough manner. He poked his finger in Plestina's eyes and also took strangle holds. The Nebraska was warned by Referee Fleson, but he still continued his unlawful tactics.

Pesek's Foul Work Costly.

After 11 minutes and 19 seconds of wrestling, in which neither man was on the floor, the referee disqualified Pesek for foul tactics, thus giving Plestina the first fall.

While the men were resting between falls Commissioner Tom O'Rourke went to Pesek's corner and ordered him to keep his thumbs out of Plestina's eyes. He also instructed Referee Fleson to at once disqualify either man who employed tactics prohibited by the law. Six minutes after they took hold for the second fall, Pesek brought this big opponent to the mat with a body hold and was on top of his man. It was the first time that either man had gone to the canvas. Plestina got on his feet in three minutes and then for twenty minutes more the men battled and pulled each other around the ring without doing anything that looked like a fall. Pesek then began foul tactics, striking at Plestina with his fist, and after being warned by the referee he repeated the offense.

Referee Fleson then sent Pesek to his corner and announced that Plestina was the winner of the fall, and it was then supposed the match was won by Plestina.

West Home Early with Plenty of Fish.

On board the Star, 2, of Executive Light one day last week the passengers all caught plenty of large fish. The Star, which was a flounder weighing a pound and a half. So plentiful were the fish that the passengers requested the captain to go home a full hour ahead of time.

JAMES COLEMAN.

King Apley and How to Care for Them.

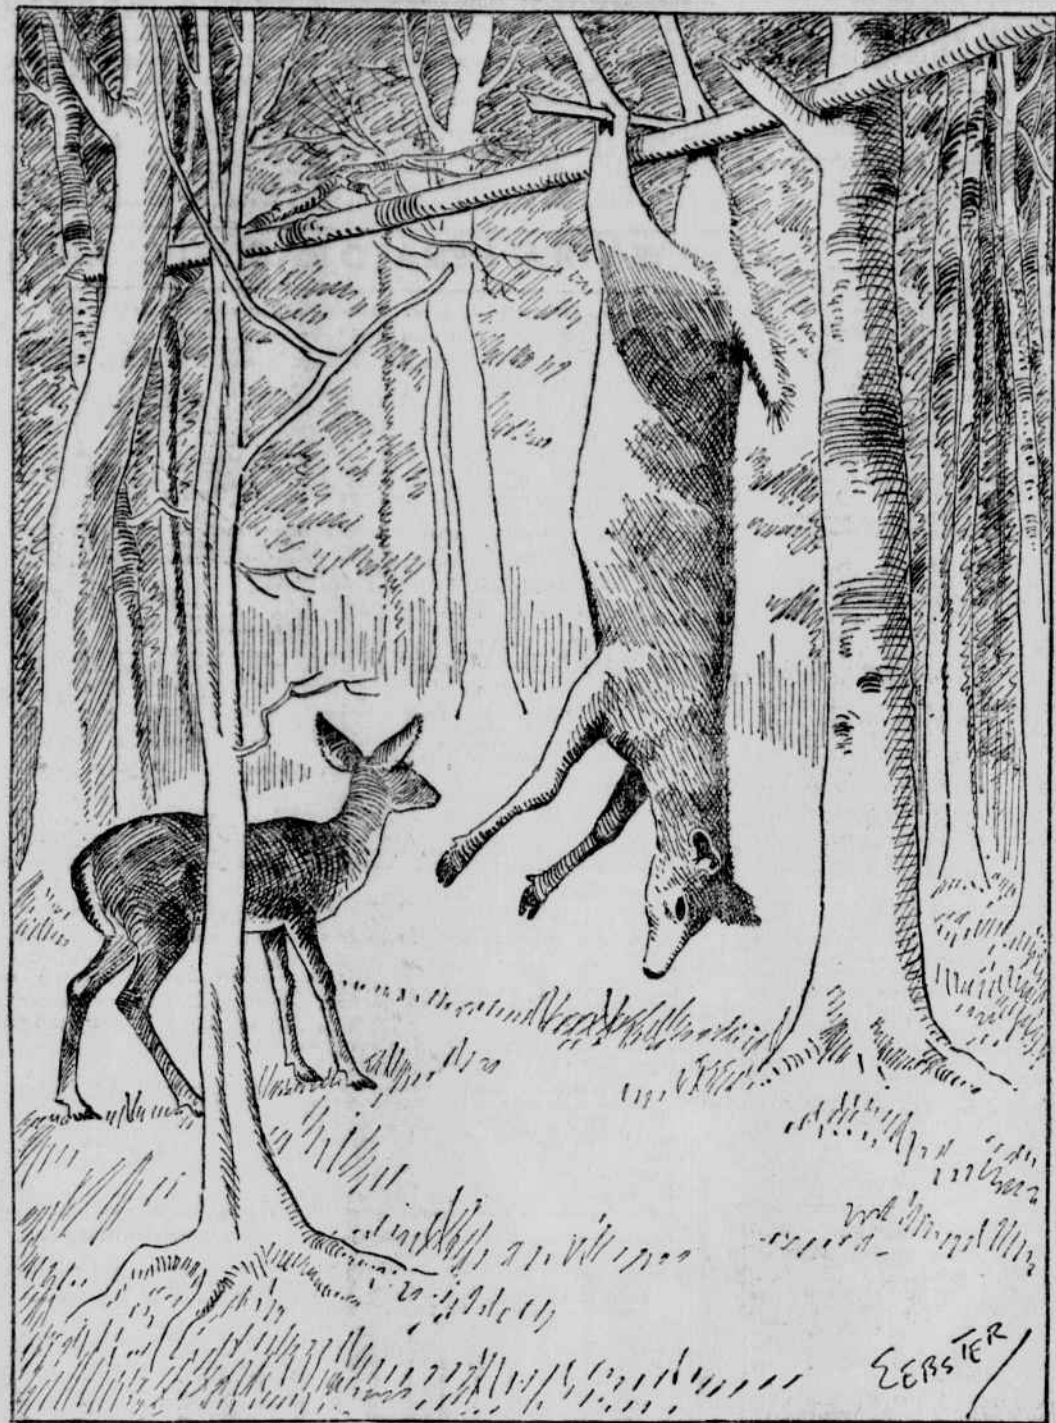

Charlie Freiburger of Sheephead Bay has made quite a study of the king and has written for the writer to publish his recipe for catching these fish. For many years he has enjoyed the fish he caught himself right through the winter and on through the spring into the summer. He writes as follows: For the benefit of those who take some time and effort to catch king fish, what to do with them and for those who are tired of carrying them home for their neighbors a recipe on how to salt them for future use is hereby given.

Scale the king and remove the entrails and head as soon after catching as possible. Leave the fish on the back and running from the stomach to the tail. Split the fish in the same manner as you have seen salt mackerel in the grocery store, being careful to remove all blood clots from the backbone. A scrubbing brush is handy for this purpose. Into a watertight butter tin or glass crock place a layer of salt (either rock or table salt) about one-half inch thick on the bottom. On this salt place a layer of fish with the skin side down. On the fish place another layer of salt. Just before the fish are placed on the salt, lay on the next layer of fish. When you have reached your top layer of fish cover it over with a layer of salt. Then, when you have reached your top layer of fish, the brine that forms place a piece of board on them and a stone on the board to hold it below the surface. Watch the fish for three or four days. Remove all blood or scum that may arise on it.

Do not add water, as the salt draws the water from the fish, forming its own brine. Keep in a cool place, on the fish escape, in the scum or in the backyard, being careful to protect it from cats and rats.

These fish can also be dried, but it is easier to keep them in the brine, and to prepare them for use it is only necessary to soak them over night in fresh water. They may be fried in the same manner as salt mackerel, and will be found superior and nourishing food. To make fish cakes of them one follows the same recipe as with salt mackerel. A very excellent codfish cake is made by using equal quantities of fish and potato and binding it together by mixing in a beaten egg and or two. If this method is not perfectly clear Mr. Freiburger may be able to supply further details. The one great necessity in salting fish is to see that your fish are put away clean and when perfectly fresh.

JERSEYMAN SEEKS RIVAL FOR DEMPSEY

Candidate for Heavyweight Crown Must Possess Exceptional Qualifications.

By CHARLES F. MATHISON.

A Jerseyman of sporting proclivities, who apparently witnessed the one sided match between Dempsey and Carpentier, and who is anxious to forestall additional slaughter by the present heavyweight champion, is in quest of a man who may be fashioned into a worthy opponent of the knight of the ring.

The man from Jersey insists that the candidate for Dempsey's crown must be moulded from the raw material so far as boxing is concerned, but it is to be physically perfect. The seeker of the downfall of Dempsey writes as follows:

The future heavyweight champion of the world may be discovered through this communication.

WANTED—The personification of Jack London's "Abysmal Brute," to take up a ring career. Must conform to the following requirements: Height, 6 feet; weight, 190 pounds or more; color, white; one who has lived his life in the open; must not possess the proverbial "yellow streak"; must be of the rough and ready type of fighter; no boxer wanted; must never have boxed professionally, a novice; must have aptitude and patience to learn. If any one thinks he can measure up to the above and is sincere in his ambition let him write to "Sportus," apt. 3, 51 West street, Newark, N. J.

Mr. "Sportus" of Newark has undertaken a difficult task. The International Sporting Club sent Sam Fitzpatrick and Tex O'Rourke in search of raw material for a heavyweight able to meet Dempsey on even terms and these experts scoured the country. They brought up to specifications and the plan was abandoned.

Yet the Jerseyman may have a system of development which may prove more successful than any put into execution, and his effort will be watched with interest.

Probably the best match arranged by Matchmaker Doonesack of the Pioneer Athletic Club will be held to-night with Phil O'Dowd, who recently defeated Joe Lynch, former bantamweight champion, and Sammy Nable, who a short time ago fought a furious draw with Jack Shanley, as the principals in the main bout of twelve rounds.

William Muldoon, chairman of the New York State Boxing Commission, has accepted the chairmanship of the athletic committee of the Knights of Columbus New York Chapter, 32,000,000 building campaign, which will be launched November 23, and continue to December 8.

George Chaney of Baltimore, who boxes Johnny Dundee for the world's 130 pounds championship at Madison Square Garden next Friday night, has scored eight knockouts in the past six months. He knocked out such good men as Cal Delaney, Georges Papin, Babe Pianta, Tim Droney, Billy Angelo, Al Murphy, Harry Stone and Phil Salvatore.

TO RATE 100 LOCAL TENNIS PLAYERS

Metropolitan Association to Include Performances In and Outside District.

By SAMUEL J. BROOKMAN.

A tennis ranking that will stand next in importance to the national rating list is to be issued early next month by the Metropolitan Tennis Association. It will include the names of at least 100 players and will be doubly interesting because of the decision of the national association to confine its selections to twenty players this year. It is to be based not on any mathematical system which considers scores, games won and lost, and so forth, but on a common sense comparison of the accomplishments of the players throughout the season of 1921.

Because of the stimulus it lends to competition and the interest it attracts among playing and non-playing devotees of the sport, the tennis ranking is a desirable thing. It may not in many cases reach the approval of players who had reason to expect a higher ranking than they received, but on the whole it values the merit of a man's game correctly and instills a desire for improvement that works for the good of the sport.

The association will not make the mistake this year that it fell into last season of ranking players solely on their performances in the metropolitan district. Last year, for instance, the committee decided to give Vincent Richards a ranking at all because most of his tournament play had been outside the district, yet the fact remained that he deserved to be rated close to the top in metropolitan tennis. The fundamental idea is to determine who the leading local players are and how the rest of them compare. Now if Brown and Smith are acknowledged to be the leading players in the district, what is there gained by placing Jones No. 1 just because Brown and Smith happened to play the bulk of their matches outside of the metropolitan area?

It was this argument that induced the metropolitan association this year to change its system of ranking and to take in all matches of metropolitan players wherever contested. It is not difficult to guess who the first three in local ranking will be, although the order is a bit in doubt. While some critics of Watson M. Washburn for the leading position, the consensus seems to lean toward Vincent Richards, with Washburn second and Ichiba Kumakage third.

The task the local ranking committee has is comparable with the task the national committee had year after year until the present one, for the activity of metropolitan players is widely scattered, and many of them compete in tournaments in all sections of the country. The gathering of the data, which entails considerable work, is in the hands of William M. Fischer of the University Heights Tennis Club and Walter L. Pate of the Nassau County Club.

The Probable Leaders.

That India intends to challenge again for the Davis cup next year was the information advanced by S. M. Jacob, captain of the team that defeated France shortly before the squad left England for their home country recently. He added that the chances favored the return of the same team that defeated France in the preliminary round this year and that he reached the semi-final of the international event.

For an initial effort in international competition the showing of the India team in 1921 far exceeded expectations. What is more, the men appeared to improve with every tournament, and impressed critics both here and in England with their possibilities. The progress of M. Slem in particular has been astonishing. In the recent Welsh covered court championship Slem triumphed over a strong field, defeating F. Gordon Lowe in the semi-final, 6-3, 6-1, and W. C. Crawley in the title round two sets out of three. Excellent in the tournament Slem outplayed Arthur M. Lovibond, the American, who won the title a year ago, with the loss of only two games in the match.

Slem, a 21-year-old Indian, is the son of a doctor and a woman of Indian descent. He is the strongest Indian player at the present time.

Soccer Victory for England.

LEICESTER, Eng., Nov. 14.—England defeated Ireland in an international soccer match to-day by 4 to 1.

J. F. BYERS NAMED AS NEW GOLF HEAD

Pittsburgher Will Succeed Howard F. Whitney, Who Refuses Renomination.

By KERR N. PETRIE.

Having sent its amateur championship this year farther West than it ever had before, it seems fitting that the United States Golf Association should look in that direction for its next president. The fact that it should be chosen for a successor to the late Howard F. Whitney has fallen upon J. Frederic Byers of the Allegheny Country Club, Pittsburgh, who for the last two years has been one of the vice-presidents of the association.

It was the desire of the nominating committee to have Mr. Whitney serve another year, but George H. Kallier of St. Louis, who resigned last spring, finds that business requires the time that he would otherwise have to give to golf affairs. Indeed, under a deep debt of gratitude to Whitney, inasmuch as he has been in office continuously since 1915, the first six years of his stewardship having been spent as secretary.

There is also to be a change of secretaries. Wynant D. Vanderpool of Morris County having been nominated for the vice-presidency along with Robert A. Gardner of Onwentsla, Chicago, re-nominated. Cornelius S. Lee of Tuxedo has been named to take Vanderpool's place. While Edward S. Moore of the National Links will be the new treasurer.

The above named officers and the following will serve on the executive committee: Roger D. Lapham of San Francisco; John Lemist, Denver; James D. Standish, Jr., Detroit; Alan F. Wilson, Merion; Thomas B. Peine, Atlanta; Azael D. Butler, Chicago; Albert J. Locke, Brae Burn, and Bonner Miller, St. Louis.

This is the first ticket nominated under the changed constitution, which provides that six of the executive committee must be members of State, sectional or recognized associations. The six are: Gardner Lapham, Lemist, Standish, Buffington and Miller, and they represent the Chicago district, California, Trans-Mississippi, Michigan State, Intercollegiate and Missouri Golf associations.

That this ticket would be difficult to have a wider geographical distribution, as on the executive committee of the U. S. G. A. now are representatives of such golfing districts and sections as Boston, metropolitan, Philadelphia, west Pennsylvania, Michigan, Southern, St. Louis, Chicago, Missouri Trans-Mississippi and California.

James A. Stillman, chairman of the retiring nominating committee, has announced the 1923 committee as follows: James F. Burke, Oakland; David McAlpin, 24, National Links; Walter J. Ross, Inverness; H. Chandler Egan, Waverly, and W. Stauffer, Audubon.

At an executive meeting of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association the following members were selected to serve on the nominating committee: Long Island, Mrs. C. D. Smith, executive chairman, Nassau; Mrs. G. H. Hochacher, Piping Rock; New Jersey district, Mrs. Charles Fowler, Baltusrol; and Mrs. M. D. Patterson, Englewood; Westchester district, Mrs. J. J. Thompson, Sitany.

The members of this committee will hold their meeting to-day.
